NOOSA REGIONAL ART GALLERY

NGUTHURU-NUR

Fiona Foley presents a recent series of photographic works on Badtjala (Butchella) Country. The people of Hervey Bay & K'Gari Island (dialect of Gubbi Gubbi) The Magna Carta Tree series examines a mangrove tree named by cattle farmer, Lindsay Titmarsh, on whose property — Tandora 11,000 acre grazing property near mouth of Mary River — the tree has been living for over 700 years. The farmer named the tree after Magna Carta — which was underwritten in 1215. It is about the same age as the tree on the farmer's property. Magna Carta is an infamous charter that has led much of Western law since its inception. The 39th Clause of the Magna Carta Libertatum states:

“No free man shall be seized or imprisoned, or stripped of his rights or possessions, or outlawed or exiled, or deprived of his standing in any other way, nor will we proceed with force against him, or send others to do so, except by the lawful judgement of his equals or by the law of the land. To no one will we sell to, no one deny or delay right or justice.”

NATURES MORTES

Michael Cook's Natures Mortes, beautifully lit to expose choreographed arrangements of plants, animals, objects and food. Grounded in a photographic aesthetic that echoes Dutch Old Master paintings, this series of work examines the industry and practices that have so effectively brought damage to traditional Aboriginal culture, the natural environment of the Australian continent - and the globe. Each image explores an aspect of the devastating impact of colonisation on Australia's First Nations peoples, and the global repercussions of environmental degradation.
